

ABLE AGEWORKS AND MASSACHUSETTS GENERAL HOSPITAL ANNOUNCE JOINT EVENT

June 6, 2016

(Boston) - Today, ABLE AgeWorks, an Operation A.B.L.E. program for salaried professionals, managers and executives, announced it would be working with Massachusetts General Hospital (MGH) to present an exclusive free training event.

On June 16, 2016 from 9:30 until 11:30 AM, ABLE AgeWorks and recruiters from MGH will come together for the first time to offer salaried professionals, managers and executives age 45 and older, an opportunity to network with them and learn how they might transfer their skills and take advantage of the available clinical and administrative professional and managerial career opportunities at the hospital.

The discussion will be moderated by Steven Taranto, Director of Human Resources at MGH Hospital. It will take place at the hospital's Yawkey Outpatient Center at 55 Fruit Street, Boston near the MBTA Charles Street red line station.

Martha Fields, ABLE AgeWorks Program Manager said, "We are very pleased to be working with MGH, which was named the #1 hospital in the nation by U.S. News & World Report. We expect a lively and wide-ranging discussion, including participation by members of the audience. They can ask the recruiters any questions about job search and MGH. Space is limited, and we hope people will take advantage of this unique opportunity."

The joint collaboration is part of the ABLE AgeWorks Professional Career Networking Club series. Full details, including registration, can be found on the Operation A.B.L.E. website: www.operationable.net.

About Operation A.B.L.E.:

Since 1982, Operation A.B.L.E. of Greater Boston has been the only organization in Massachusetts whose sole mission has been to provide comprehensive training and employment services for job seekers 45 years of age and older. Since it began, more than 34,000 individuals have been assisted by Operation A.B.L.E., which is celebrating its 34th Anniversary.